ing eight lines fifty cents A Man of Fashion in Loudon. The London correspondent of the Boston Post writes: I have a friend-though I do not boast of him-who is a simonpure London man of fashion. He is the second son of a lord, and has an income of five thousand pounds a year. Of course he is not so ungentlemanly as to engage in any occupation. I fear the old Baron, his father, would make short work of his five thousand if he dared to hint a purpose of "going into trade." And what does he do? He seems to be the most enviable of men, for I never saw mortal more perfectly content with everybody, himself included. As his day career is the type of high London society in general, I will sketch it for you. In his persou he represents more perfectly and exhaustively than any one I know, the spirit of aristoeratic London in the season. He rises in his room at the Albany at half-past 8, and breakfasts at the Junior Carleton, close by; skims the Times, and chats with his boon companions till 10 o'clock. Promptly at that hour his groom appears with the sleekest of chestnuts, which he mounts and makes for Rotten Row. There he flirts, hears the latest gossip, books a wager for the Derby, and takes an hour's brisk canter. From the t'ark he goes to lunch-not to the Junior Carleton, but to some West End house; likely enough he drops in to lunch with Lady Blanche, and then goes to lunch a second time with Lady Amelia-that is, lounges at lunch time into perhaps a half-dozen houses, where he nibbles at the delicacies and enjoys a refreshing chat. The afternoon is full of engagements; it is fete champetre at Richmond or Putney, a match of cricket at Lord's, a race on the Thames, a royal breakfast party in the gardens of Buckingham palace, or Windsor, a crack game of billiards at the club, a meet of the hounds in Middlesex, a drive into Kent or Surrey, an hour at the Exhibition, a pleasant little party to the Academemy, or whitebait dinner at Greenwich. In the evening his brain is in a perfect muddle what, among so many things to do. There is l'atti as Desdemona at Covent Garden, there is Dumas' "Diane de Lys" at the Princess', and the Wandering Jew at the makes a tour of the boxes of his acquaintances. Here he sees no more than any plebeian can see for a half-crown; who, from his berch in the amphitheater, may gaze down upon the most dazzling array of dress, jewels, fashion and rank in Europe. Covent Garden on a night in the mid-season is wonderful; everybody is as resplendent as he or she can devise; everybody enjoys himself; and the theatre is a saloon as well as a theatre; where society goes to make itself heard and seen as well as to listen and be-What a brilliant, noisy, clattering London it is, one of those limpid June nights! covered ways from the doors of lofty mansions to the curbstones, with carpets laid beneath, obstruct your way at every other step; and as you pass, cloud-like forms pop out of the car-liages, whisk by in a twinkling, and hurry along in over the pathway; and so quickly, however, but that you are dazzled by a glitter of jewels and a shimmer of silk. Within there is the subdued hubbub of conversation, or, perhaps, the rumble of a waltz; all around about is bustle and rattling; and you ask yourself it these are really the melancholy folk which the blithe old Freuch chronicler of the fourteenth century so lugubriously describes. My fashionable friend, who seldom goes to bed, in the season, until he has made his appearance in half a dozen West End drawing rooms, clearly thous it all, and comes out next morning as only an Englishman can—as fresh and red heeked as if he had just come off a Devonshire

Potomac Pearl Hominy Mills. GEORGE R. HILL & CO.,

ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA.

With a view to the fall trade, we respectfully announce that these Mills are now completed, and that we will take pleasure in showing samples of all our goods (now manufacturing) to dealers or others intered. We manufacture PEARL HOMINY, GRITS AND SAMP,

AND PEARL FLOUR AND MEAL. The offal from these various articles combined makes a very valuable article of food for horses and cows, to which the attention of those inter-ested is invited. We claim superiority for the Hominy made upon our Patent Mills for the following reasons: First. It is made from dry corn without having to go through the soaking process necessary in the old way of making hominy, for the pur pose of removing the husks, which causes it to begin to spoil from the moment it is thus made. Whereas our process puts it in a drier condition than corn ever is naturally.

Secondly. The same buck of our Hominy will produce fifty per cent more of the cooked article than by the wet process, as ours swells while cooking, while the other swells while soaking, before being cooked.

Thirdly. It takes half the time to cook.

Fourthly. It can be shipped with safety from spoiling to any climate, making a cheap substitute for rice and beans.

The above also applies to our Pearl Corn Grits. The best proof of the superiority of Hominy and Grits made upon our Patent Mills is that they have been adopted by the Army and Navy of the United States, and approved by all who have used them. Address orders or communications to
